Department of Biblical Studies:

Biblical Theology (5 ECTS)

Tues/Thurs 13:30–15:30

This course teaches that, though containing diverse genres, there is one overarching story of the Bible. It will introduce the major turning points of the Bible's storyline and trace key themes from Genesis through Revelation, including creation and new creation, God's dwelling presence among his people, and the Kingdom of God. By the end of the course, students will be able to trace a theme throughout the canon of the Bible, summarize the major events of the Bible, and how the covenants assist in understanding the overarching story of the Bible.

Greek Exegesis: Colossians (5 ECTS)

Tues/Thurs 9–10:50am

Students will apply the various syntactical and grammatical concepts learned in previous Greek courses to the book of Colossians. They will translate and learn proper exegetical methodology for interpreting epistles and apply those methods to Colossians. Relevant issues in Colossians pertaining to authorship, historical background, and theology will also be discussed. Students will also learn to trace the argument found both in individual passages as well as the entire letter to the Colossians.

Hebrew Prose (5 ECTS)

Tues/Thurs 13:30–15:30

This course will build on the basics of Biblical Hebrew morphology and syntax to learn the necessary skills to read and interpret Biblical Hebrew prose compositions on the basis of the Masoretic text. Methods for interpreting Hebrew prose will be specifically applied to the Book of Kings in the Old Testament.

New Testament Theology (5 ECTS)

Wed 13:30–15:30/Fri 9–10:50am

Students examine various theological themes that run throughout the New Testament, comparing and contrasting how different NT authors contextualize each theme, and identifying the unique contributions that each writer makes. Students will also learn to recognize ways in which the diverse perspectives of the NT writers fit together into a unified whole.

Department of Practical Theology:

Developing Healthy Churches (5 ECTS)

Mon/Wed 9-10:50am

The church is at the centre of God's great purpose for this world—and the universe. As a result, nothing can be more important than for local churches to be healthy. This course offers an examination of what constitutes a spiritually healthy church, how to assess church health, and the development of church health. Several models of the church will be examined, as well as what constitutes the core elements and practices in the life of a healthy church. A central part of the course is helping the student develop a philosophy of church ministry, and a plan for applying this to a particular church context.

Ethics and Worldview (5 ECTS)

Tues/Thurs 13:30-16:30

What does it look like to integrate a Biblical worldview into every aspect of our lives? How do we bring a theological mindset to our engagement with culture and society? How do we respond to contemporary ethical questions, especially with respect to 'hot-button' issues which challenge a Christian perspective? These are some of the questions addressed by this class. It comprises an introduction to Christian ethics, including normative ethics, with special attention to Biblical integration, and a survey of key contemporary issues in applied ethics. It will also address the contours of a Christian worldview, and how this should shape our lives practically. Finally, it will engage with the particular challenges posed by the cultural hegemony of secularism in the Western World.

Contextualization (5 ECTS)

Wed 13:30-16:30

This course introduces students to the theory and practice of contextual theology and contextualization. It examines the biblical foundations, historical development, and key models of contextual theology, aiming to equip students with hermeneutical skills to interpret and communicate the Gospel faithfully in ways that are biblically, theologically grounded, and culturally relevant.

Introduction to World Missions (5 ECTS)

Fri 9am-12pm

As a missionary religion, the Christian faith carries both the mandate and the responsibility for missions. The essence of the Great Commission is that God desires to make Himself known to the world and bring people into a relationship with Himself. Therefore, Christians must understand God's mission for the world and be able to communicate it effectively. This course aims to equip students with an understanding of missions from biblical, theological, historical, cultural, and strategic perspectives. By exploring these perspectives, they will be motivated and prepared to engage personally in God's mission and to mobilize their local churches for this purpose.

Fundraising, Finance, and Christian Ministry (5 ECTS)

Fri 9am-12pm

For many in Christian ministry, the lack of finances can hinder or even stop effective ministry. In addition to this, many of us have never been taught some of the basics of personal finance. This class will focus on those two issues: 1.) How can we successfully raise financial support for ministry, And 2.) What are the basics for personal financial health for long-term ministry.

Department of Systematic and Historical Theology:

Public Theology (5 ECTS)

Mon 13:30-16:30

Theology is meant to help people to understand life – with all of its struggles, issues, and challenges – in light of what God has done, and will do, through His Son, Jesus Christ. This course is built on the premise that theology is designed to help us live the life that God intended for us to live, which implies that theology should contribute to the common good, and to human well-being. The term “public” in the course title is meant to emphasize the fact that theology is not merely an academic exercise to be done in school, but should be focused on the ministry of helping people live faithful and meaningful lives before God.

Theology as Worship with the Church Fathers (5 ECTS)

Mon 13:30–16:30

A basic knowledge will be gained of the connection between theology and worship in the thinking of prominent Greek and Latin Fathers in the Ancient Church.

Students will examine the thought of one Latin or Greek Father from the Ancient Church and lead a seminar discussion based on their research.

Foundations of Theology (5 ECTS)

Tues/Wed 9–10:50am

This course provides a foundational exploration of Bibliology (the doctrine of Scripture) and Prolegomena (foundational, introductory matters in theology). It investigates the nature of Scripture as God’s Word, including revelation, inspiration, inerrancy, canon, authority, text and translation, illumination, interpretation, application and proclamation while situating these discussions within the broader framework of theological method. The course integrates biblical exegesis, historical theology, and contemporary evangelical scholarship to equip students with a robust understanding of how Scripture functions as the foundation for life, for theological reflection and for practical ministry.
