FALL COURSE OFFERINGS & DESCRIPTIONS

31 August – 4 December 2026

Department of Biblical Studies:

Elementary Greek (5 ECTS)

Mondays | 08.00 – 10.50

Mr. Logan Copley

This course prepares students to be able to use the original language of the New Testament for sound analysis of the Biblical text. At the end of the course the student will have an excellent comprehension of the basic elements of Koine Greek.

Biblical Theology (5 ECTS)

Mondays | 13:30 – 16:20

Dr. Adam Day

This course teaches that, though containing diverse genres, there is one overarching story of the Bible. It will introduce the major turning points of the Bible's storyline and trace key themes from Genesis through Revelation, including creation and new creation, God's dwelling presence among his people, and the Kingdom of God. By the end of the course, students will be able to trace a theme throughout the canon of the Bible, summarize the major events of the Bible, and how the covenants assist in understanding the overarching story of the Bible.

Department of Practical Theology:

Youth Ministry (5 ECTS)

Mondays | 13.30 – 16.20

Dr. Ken Moser

Ministry to young people has often been a struggle for the church. Can youth ministry be more than attracting a crowd of teens with the promise of fun and then give them a Bible message? This course will examine youth ministry with the goal of structuring a program that is effective in the long term for both evangelism and discipleship. As we do this, we will think theologically rather than merely aiming for “what will work” or “what has always been done.” In addition, we will briefly examine the history of youth ministry and the present difficulties that are facing the church. This course will also provide a practical framework along with the activities themselves for an effective weekly youth gathering.

Theology of Missions (5 ECTS)

Wednesdays | 08.00 – 10.50

Dr. Rahman Yakubu

Ministry to young people has often been a struggle for the church. Can youth ministry be more than attracting a crowd of teens with the promise of fun and then give them a Bible message? This course will examine youth ministry with the goal of structuring a program that is effective in the long term for both evangelism and discipleship. Biblical Preaching (5 ECTS)

Wednesdays | 09.00 – 10.50, 13.30 – 15.20

Dr. David Sandifer & Mr. Robert Landon

As the Word of God is central to effective ministry, it is essential that Christian leaders be competent to preach the Scriptures. Expository preaching is highlighted in the course. This introductory course examines the theology and art of preaching foundational to effectively explaining and proclaiming Scripture in a relevant and practical manner with the objective that people’s lives are changed for the glory of God. The course has two basic components: 1) a theological component – discussion through classroom lectures and assigned readings that explore the theology of preaching, and 2) a practical component – the student gains practical experience through preparing and delivering two sermons. In bridging these two components, in-class listening to examples of recorded sermons provides the opportunity for discussion and critique.

Contextualization (5 ECTS)

Thursdays | 08.00 – 10.50

Dr. Rahman Yakubu

This course introduces students to the theory and practice of contextual theology and contextualization. It examines the biblical foundations, historical development, and key models of contextual theology, aiming to equip students with hermeneutical skills to interpret and communicate the Gospel faithfully in ways that are biblically, theologically grounded, and culturally relevant.

Department of Systematic and Historical Theology:History of Eastern Christianity (5 ECTS)

Mondays | 13.30 – 16.20

Dr. Tom Marinello

While many are familiar with the history of Christianity in the West encompassing the Latin Church headquartered in Rome and the “Greek” churches in communion with Constantinople, not as many know the history of Eastern Christianity (e.g., Coptic churches, Nestorian Church, Armenian Church, St. Thomas Christians, etc.) even though Eastern Christianity rivaled Western Christianity in size and surpassed it in scope before the coming of Islam. This course will cover the Church history and historical theology associated with Christianity in North Africa and Asia from the beginning of the Church at Pentecost until about AD 1500. This course also will consider the lessons twenty-first century Christians might learn from the history and doctrinal struggles associated with the churches under consideration.

Christian Ethics & Society (5 ECTS)

Tuesdays | 08.00 – 10.50 & Fridays | 09.00 – 11.50

Dr. David Sandifer

This course is for both the Master of Evangelical Theology program and the Master of Divinity program. Building on the “Public Theology” course, this course will seek to apply the foundations of an engaged theology to some of the key areas of contemporary life. The approach taken will be two-fold: on the one hand, to seek to flesh out the ramifications of a Christian vision of reality for such key areas as “what is the good life?”, marriage and family, work and vocation, civic polity and the common good, and the opportunities and challenges of new technologies; and on the other hand, to contrast these with the values and practices which emanate from competing visions of reality. The goal is to equip students with the kind of reflective tools which will enable them, in concrete ministry settings, to help Christians translate theological commitments into a lived critique of their culture, and into faithful habits of life.

Modern Church History (5 ECTS)

Tuesdays | 13.30 - 16.20

Dr. Thomas Marinello

In this course we will cover a basic knowledge of the development of the Christian Church's theology and practices from 1517 to today.

Public Theology (5 ECTS)

Tuesdays | 13.30 - 16.20

Dr. Jim Dahl

Theology is meant to help people to understand life – with all of its struggles, issues, and challenges – in light of what God has done, and will do, through His Son, Jesus Christ. This course is built on the premise that theology is designed to help us live the life that God intended for us to live, which implies that theology should contribute to the common good, and to human well-being. The term “public” in the course title is meant to emphasize the fact that theology is not merely an academic exercise to be done in school, but should be focused on the ministry of helping people live faithful and meaningful lives before God.

Theological Foundations (5 ECTS)

Wednesdays | 08.00 - 10.50

Dr. Peter Hays

This course is your entry point into serious theological study. You'll explore two big questions that every student of theology needs to wrestle with first: What is the Bible, and how do we study it?

On the first question, you'll examine what Christians mean when they say the Bible is "God's Word" — how God communicated through human authors, why the Bible can be trusted as true, which books belong in it and why, and how it carries authority in our lives today. You'll also look at the practical side: how the Bible has been copied and translated across centuries, and how we read, understand, and apply it well.

On the second question, you'll think carefully about theology itself as a discipline — what it is, how it works, and what good theological thinking looks like.

Throughout the course, you'll draw on close reading of Scripture, the history of Christian thought, and current evangelical scholarship. By the end, you'll have a solid foundation for understanding why the Bible sits at the center of Christian life, ministry, and theological study — and the tools to engage it confidently.

God the Father (5 ECTS)

Thursdays | 13.30 – 16.20

Dr. Szaszi Bene

The course explores the person of God the Father, the first person of the Trinity, as he is revealed in Scripture and confessed by the church. Beginning with the God of Israel and the “Abba” of Jesus’ own teaching, the course traces the doctrine of divine fatherhood through the New Testament and church history, and examines the Father’s works of creation, providence, election, and sending (missio Dei). Because every ministry stands or falls with its vision of God, the course pays sustained attention to the pastoral and missional significance of knowing God as Father — adoption, prayer, suffering, and the healing of distorted images of fatherhood in the church and in culture.
